Annual School Report.

The steady march of time brings us to the close of another school year. As we submit our report for the year just closed, we feel satisfied with the work done by our teachers.

At our several visits to the schools, and in the final examination work, we could see that the pupils had been well instructed and had made good advancement in their studies.

By continuing the two small schools, averaging respectively five and six pupils, we diminished the number of weeks' schooling for each pupil, making thirty-three weeks to forty of last year. Is this beneficial to the children in all respects?

All should make an effort to visit our schools and see how they are conducted. At all times they are assured of a cordial welcome by the teachers. Perhaps this has been mentioned in our past reports, but it cannot be advised too often. The following is the
